Lectionary Thoughts

(Today's reflection is from Dr. David Lose)

Doubt is not the opposite of faith. Doubt, in fact, is probably a necessary ingredient to faith. Faith, by definition, is trust in spite of a lack of evidence. Faith is not knowledge. Faith is more tension-filled. It is acting as if something is true even when you have no proof that it is.

Which means that when we talk about the “gathering of the faithful,” we’re not talking about the gathering of those who’s faith/knowledge is absolute or certain or bedrock. We’re talking about those people who have all kinds of questions and doubts but still find joy and wonder in this message of good news about new life. Or maybe who want to find joy and wonder, haven’t yet, but keeping coming because of their hope.

All of which suggests two things to me for this week’s sermon. First, let people know it’s okay to doubt. In fact, let them know that it’s probably a requirement of faith. Because, honestly, in light of all the death and trauma and disappoint and tragedy that colors every human life, if you don’t have at least some difficulty believing the promise that God not only raised one person, Jesus, from the dead, but also promises new life and second chances and forgiveness and grace to all, then you’re probably not paying attention.

Second, I would like to ask people how we might live differently if acted like God’s promises were true. So often, I think, these promises are so familiar to us that we hold them far back in our head but don’t actually think about them and so don’t act as if they are true. But if it’s true that God raised Jesus from the dead... If it’s true that God promises to renew the whole creation and grant us new life... If it’s true that nothing – nothing we’ve done or has been done to us – can separate us from the love of God... If it’s true that God will not turn God’s back on any of us but always reaches out to us in grace, mercy, and forgiveness... If any of this – let alone all of this – is true, then how might we live our lives this week differently? How might this faith – not knowledge, but trusting, courageous faith – change how we look at our relationships, and our politics, and our work, and our resources, and our future?

And if it takes a little time to let all this sink in, to come to active trust and faith that these promises are true, well, then let's keep in mind that we're in good company. Jesus' first disciples struggled with all this as well.

Because I am a child of God, I will...

Romans 12: 1-2: "And so, dear brothers and sisters, I plead with you to give your bodies to God because of all he has done for you. Let them be a living and holy sacrifice – the kind he will find acceptable. This is truly the way to worship him. Don't copy the behavior and customs of this world, but let God transform you into a new person by changing the way you think. Then you will learn to know God's will for you, which is good and pleasing and perfect."

On Palm Sunday, we were each invited to prayerfully consider the difference that the risen Christ makes in our own life. Orange bulletin inserts were distributed with these words from Romans 12 and space on the back for responding to what God has done for us. Remember to bring these inserts with you to worship on April 25 – 26. These services will include a special time to bring these inserts forward as a personal offering and rededication of our lives to Christ. No one will read the responses. Weather-permitting, the services will conclude with burning the responses outside the narthex. If you need a copy of the insert, please pick one up in the narthex this weekend or contact the church office.
